EARLY CARIBBEAN

The Caribbean Islands were populated in a series of migrations beginning millennia before Columbus set sail for the New World. Of the two major groups of people that inhabited the islands at the time of his arrival, the Tainos and the Island Caribs, only the latter had arrived recently enough to have maintained folkloric traditions of their original origin. Although it is often said the Tainos migrated to the islands, it was their ancestors and other groups who were on the move. Archaeological evidence indicated that the initial discoverers came from two directions. The first migration started around 4000 BC. These prehistoric people, probably originating on the Yucatan Peninsula, occupied the large islands of Cuba and Hispaniola. The second group, a coastal culture that arose in Trinidad, began moving northward through the islands around 2000 BC. They came as far away as Puerto Rico by 1000 BC, settling the Lesser Antilles and the Virgin Islands along the way. As early as 500 BC, a new wave of immigration commenced from the mouth of the Orinoco River in what is now Venezuela. This new group of "immigrants" was the ancestors of the Tainos, the people who inhabited the Bahamas, the Greater Antilles and the northern Lesser Antilles when Columbus arrived in 1492.

NEXT PORT OF CALL: BARBADOS

Barbados is a coral island, pushed out of the sea by volcanic activity in a far away time. On the West Coast of Barbados, coral shore beaches of fine white sand stretch along a blue-green sea. Coral reefs fringe the Barbados shoreline to provide excellent snorkeling and scuba diving. Along the East Coast lively surf is blown briskly by the strong and constant trade winds and the waves pound against a rocky shore. The constant breeze of the trade winds gives Barbados a mild and pleasant tropical climate. Geologically, Barbados is unique, being actually two landmasses that merged together over the years. This and other anomalies make Barbados quite phenomenal, and there are geological structures that you will find only in Barbados.

Barbados is a very beautiful island, with lots of art, activities, nightlife, music, history and some of the best restaurants to be found anywhere. But what makes Barbados even more special, and the reason so many visitors keep returning to the island year after year, is the Barbadians, called Bajans, who are warm and friendly souls and always ready to greet you with a sincere smile. Barbadians make you feel welcome and special in this lovely Caribbean island. You'll feel it's your home. And you will want to come back again and again
